

Building better futures
for children with disabilities

Home Modifications

Support and advice from a trained therapist in home modifications for your child to be more independent and participate in family and community life.

Children's participation in family life and their growing independence is important to their learning and development.

Home modifications are changes to the structure, layout or fittings of your home that support your child to safely access and move around their home.

There are several laws and regulatory frameworks, for example Building Codes and Australian Standards which regulate home modifications.

The NDIA will consider whether home modifications are value for money and are likely to be effective and beneficial for your child.